

AS/NZS 4801 OH&S Management Systems Audit

Australian/New Zealand Standard 4801:2001 – Occupational Health and Safety Management Systems audits – are an important step for you as an employer to establish and certify your health and safety systems in-line with an internationally recognised accreditation process. AS/NZS 4801 systems work under a framework of continuous improvement, and promote the active participation of the workforce, sound risk management principles as well as the setting of specific targets and objectives in line with broader business planning principles.

The benefits

The benefits to you as an employer in seeking accreditation under AS/NZS 4801 are numerous.

- As an employer, you can develop workplace health and safety systems that are flexible and suited to dealing with change and developing workforces;
- Accreditation enhances your businesses prospects as many tendering processes now require active demonstration of a workable health and safety management system;
- Your employees can be engaged in developing policy and procedure for their own health and safety;
- Systems are developed to ensure that OHS targets and objectives are implemented for benchmarking purposes.

Meet and manage your legislative requirements

Konekt can provide you with pre-audit services that will determine what actions are required of you to develop an Occupational Health and Safety Management System, in addition to your obtaining formal certification and annual 4801 audits.

An AS4801 Audit can help you meet and manage your legislative requirements and employer accountabilities as well as fulfilling employee and public expectations.

With continual reform of Occupational Health and Safety legislation, are you finding it increasingly difficult to identify and meet your obligations?
